the accomplishment of the legal purpose ends. By continual association with criminals continual association with criminals convict learns to view crime in a new light. It ceases to have re-pusive features. The law is looked upon as an obstacle of the exercise if personal rights, the world and its customs as oppres-sive, and all social restraint as transidal. Thus by the gradual formation of wrong views of crime and human rights—views leveloped or crime and human rights views leveloped through converse with confermed criminals. society is permanently defrauded of the ser-vices and influence or good of the individual who, under d fferent management, might have been recovered. But the evil does not endmust spread. It is like certain forms of dis-case, it affects all who come into contact with it. The victors man poisons the moral atmos-phe-o of those aroun him. hus by permit-ting individuals, who night be use a med, to become hardened and confirmed in criminal habits, the state see in motion an influence enter the penitentiary society ought to see that enter the pententiary socialy days to the they come out better than they go in. The prison ought to be accorranged, and confinement therein so managed that the convicts may be brought because of society worther for por ant element of prison discipline is either entirely lost sight of or else thrust aside through a false no ion of economy which inmates. They say they lose all self-respect by constant intercourse with the victous and as memoers for the or the charles are sometimes to such large numbers of confirmed law breakers, they are left intilities there of recovering an honesy place in society. At that prison the convicts are together for conlife. There can be no real accomplishciation. And serein our state continuitary is a total failure. There is not even a pretense at restraint. As shown in a former letter reat raint is under present conditions as impos-sibility. The only sope we have is that the erils inherent in our system are so apparent as to compel the attention of all was have the truest interests of society at beart. Let the next legislature provide for such ches gos as are needed in the provide for such charges as are beened in the building, and for the introduction of such measures of a reformatory diaracter as expe-tiones has semonstrated to be of value, and our oriminal class will decrease rapid y. If our oriminal class will decrease rapid y. It is present management of the penitentiary was as well also to provide for measures of reform as for the hold y comfort, there would be but little wanted. The present officials study economy and as much as in possible see that the state does not suffer; but they are lower-loss where effectent administration of ciscipline is most desirable, for heir hands are tied. A is most desirable, for their hands are tied. A young man was discharged a few cars ago (died, since) who was e only 28 years of age had served three terms there—agenting the hest years of his about life within prison walls under the eart of our prison efficials. They were unable so comenset the laftunes east ed on a m by his fellow convicts, and could only grison at such a sack fate. Inder a system which would separate him complexly from the other prisoners in all probability he influence of the officers would have sayed him.
